

Sunday
April 16th. 1899.

15, SHERRIFF ROAD,

WEST HAMPSTEAD. N. W.

Dear Professor Kellner,

The arrival of the enclosed telegram to-day has rather perturbed us. We only hope it does not mean that you went to the National Liberal Club to-day!

As soon as it arrived, I posted off to Willenden Green, but I found no one at home, & my knocks & rings were left unanswered.

I trust the mistake is only in the form of the telegram.

Mr. Hobson, who lives in the country, suggested Wednesday next (April 19th)
or the next again (April 26th);
and it was these days
my wife wrote to Mr.
Kellner about.

As the post takes some time to reach Mr. Hobson, we should be glad (if there is not now a note for us in the post) if

You would telegraph to-morrow
if you can come next Wednesday.

If you prefer the next again (Apr. 26th), there is no need of a wire.

We should expect you at the N.S.C. at 4.30 p.m.; I should be on the look-out for you at the door.

The best way to reach the club is train to Baker St.; bus to Charing Cross; & walk down Northumberland Avenue.

With best regards
yours very truly
James F. Muirhead
